Joshua is a Senior at Princeton concentrating in the German philosophy and intellectual history track or the media and aesthetics track in the German department. He is also pursuing a certificate in European cultural studies. His current academic interests are philosophy, art history, literary theory, and film. Outside of class, he is an editor for the Nassau Weekly as well as editor and founding member of Foundations.

After Princeton shut down in March, Joshua lived off campus for the spring and fall semester, with a small pod of friends. He was lucky to salvage somewhat of a college experience but certainly not the senior year anyone hoped for.

He is enjoying his intellectual history classes as well as his class on the security state and had fun biking through Princeton in the summer and fall.

Miles is in the Gallatin school at NYU and exploring a wide range of courses as he takes advantage of NYU's broad offerings. He is living in an apartment with two other freshman and exploring more of Manhattan and the area around NYU. Miles remains active in the crypto currency market, tracking the progress of bitcoin and other currencies.

Dan is the CEO of Overtime, which he and Zack Weiner founded in 2016. Overtime is a sports network focused on young, digital-native sports fans. The company's programming focuses on talented young athletes, in particular high school athletes who play basketball and football.

Overtime is a distributed sports network. Instead of offering content through a single channel, Overtime's programming is available across Instagram, Twitter, Facebook, YouTube, Snapchat, on TV (through a partnership with regional sports network SportsNet New York) and through Overtime itself.

Dan is Adjunct Assistant Professor of Public Service at NYU's Robert F. Wagner Graduate School of Public Service. He teaches courses on Social Entrepreneurship. He gets rave reviews from his students.

Dan closed his office in March and he and Melanie have been working virtually for the last 9 months. Their great fun was being upstate through the spring, summer, and fall. Melanie created a massive garden from which they not only ate but also shared with friends and family. Melanie and Dan also hiked all through the Mohonk preserve and biked around the Hudson Valley as well. Josie and Bandit were very happy to be upstate and hike, chase squirrels and more.
